

SUPPORT IS AVAILABLE FOR PEOPLE WHO REQUIRE ASSISTANCE

TRANSPORTATION, LODGING, AND SURVIVORSHIP

- People living with lung cancer may face many challenges along the treatment journey, especially when treatment requires daily, long-distance travel and/or extended absence from work or family
- Seek national and/or local programs that may offer logistical support

SUPPORT PROGRAMS FOR PEOPLE UNDERGOING TREATMENT FOR CANCER

THE IMPORTANCE OF FINDING THE RIGHT SUPPORT

Adequate transportation to and from appointments/procedures, affordable lodging, and the ability to find the right assistance programs are important considerations for people living with lung cancer who are undergoing active therapy

Help with air travel and/or ground transportation during treatment is available from multiple organizations

Seek lodging support from hospitals and/or treatment centers that provide short-term housing or discount programs with nearby motels/hotels for people living with lung cancer and their loved ones

Get information or help from a cancer care social worker regarding survivorship support

Take advantage of specialized support groups (ie, those dedicated to people living with lung cancer) to help overcome the challenges of cancer treatment
